How States Have Gained.

SOME INTERESTING CENSUS FIGURES FROM SUPERINTENDENT PORTER. REPUBLICAN STATES LEAD THE DEMOCRATIC BY THREE MILLION.

Superintendent Porter has given out the population of different States from time to time. But here is a collection and compilation of all the figures that he has, together with some comparative statement of the figures for 1880. Superintendent Porter has so many inquiries for full details from all the States, so many queries have been put by people and papers that this information will give many hundreds of New Englanders an answer. The table follows:

States.	1890.	1880.
New York	6,621,149	5,082,871
Pennsylvania	5,258,113	4,282,891
Illinois	3,826,351	3,077,871

Wyoming	60,705	20,789
Idaho	84,385	32,610
Nevada	45,761	62,266
The total population of the country was 62,622,250. The census returns show the most slightly change some of these totals. It is noticeable that there is a slow tremendous gain on the part of the Northern States and especially the Republican States as compared with the Southern States and the Democratic States. This table shows the actual increase in population in the 20 leading States of the Union: 10 Republicans and 10 Democratic, as they voted in 1888 and 1884 respectively:

Rep. States.	Increase.	Dem. States.	Increase.
Pennsylvania	975,222	Missouri	509,682
New York	899,278	Texas	521,851

Special Announcement.

We have made arrangements with Dr. B. J. Kendall Co., publishers of "A Treatise on the Horse and his Diseases," which will enable us to supply the publication at the cost of our subscription price, which is 25 cents, to work for it by sending their address and inclosing a two-cent stamp for mailing same to Dr. B. J. KENDALL CO., ENOSBURG FALLS, VT. This book is now recognized as standard authority upon all the diseases of the horse, and several sale attempts, over four million copies having been sold in the past ten years, a sale never before reached by any publication in the same period of time. We feel confident that any person who avails himself of our offer will go on to avail themselves of this opportunity of obtaining a valuable book.

It is incorrect say that you sneeze this project in sending for the "Treatise." Hide-ahead remarkable for only a short time. Once.

Merit Wins.

We desire to say to our citizens, that for years we have been selling Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Dr. Bigg's Nut Pine Tar Cough Syrup, Arnica Salve and Electric Bitters, and have never handled remedies that sell as well, or that have given such universal satisfaction. We feel confident in guarantee them every time, and we stand ready to refund the purchase price, if satisfactory results do not follow the use of them. Medicines have won their great popularity purely on their merits. R. H. Moody Druggist.

A Baby Saved!

Since birth my baby had running sores all over his head, and the doctors said that he must die, for they could not heal them. I used everything I ever heard of, but it was no good. He grew worse, and he would not nurse. My husband's sister told me to try Sulphur Bitters as she had great faith in them. I used a bottle and the sores commenced to heal. After using two bottles more, the sores all healed and I considered my baby saved.—Mother, Concord, N. H. 2w37

CREDIT DUE TO CHAIRMAN MANLEY.

There were very many who contributed to the splendid Republican victory Monday but among them none who is deserving of more credit than Hon. J. H. Manley, the able and hard-working chairman of the Republican State committee. While Mr. Manley's work has not been of a character to attract much public attention, it has, nevertheless, been arduous and exacting. It called for the carrying out of an enormous correspondence and for the making of a close and accurate canvass of the State. No detail was overlooked, and when the work closed Saturday night Chairman Manley was able to predict with a certainty born of knowledge of the situation, a splendid Republican victory. That prediction has shown upon what good grounds he based his prediction. Mr. Manley is an organizer of superior ability, and the party has in its ranks no better worker. Kennebec Journal.

CHEERING NEWS TO REPUBLICANS.

The news from Maine will cheer Republicans all over the country, and will inspire them to renewed energy. It will far more than offset the falling off which the local temperance issue inflicted on the Republican majority in Vermont. Not only is it sure to stop all this Democratic bluff, but it ought to wake up Republicans everywhere to the fact that a tremendous November tidal wave victory is in their own grasp, if they but work for it. The early passage of the Tariff and Appropriation bills and adjournment of Congress will insure such an era of business prosperity as, taken together with this great victory and an active campaign in other States, will bring about an old fashioned Republican cyclone of triumph in November. ONE HUNDRED PER CENT.

Speaking of the delusion of per centages reminds us of a story. It was the evening of a State election, and the citizens had gathered in Johnson hall to hear the returns, each side appealing as the returns favored. Pretty soon the returns from the town of Perkins came, and the chairman announced:

"Perkins: a Democratic gain of one hundred per cent."

And then the Democrats applauded vociferously. When they finally quieted down, the chairman finished reading:

"Last year, Republican 13, Democratic 1; this year, Republican 12, Democratic 2."

Somehow the gain didn't seem so large then, but it was one hundred per cent just the same. [Gardiner Home Journal.

POLITICAL POINTS HERE AND THERE.

The Minnesota Democrats have nominated Hon. Thomas Wilson for Governor.

Harry A. Richardson, of Dover, is the Republican nominee for Governor of Delaware.

The Prohibition party in Massachusetts met at Worcester, Sept. 10, and nominated Dr. Blackmer for governor.

A New York despatch says that Frank Munsey, proprietor of the Argosy and Munsey's Weekly, has purchased a controlling interest in the New York Press and is now managing it. He is a native of Augusta, and a warm personal friend of James G. Blaine.

The new Election law in New York, which is patterned after the Australian system, received its first practical test at a village election in Far Rockaway last week. It did not work satisfactorily, owing largely to the stupidity and ignorance of the voters and the officers at the polls.

Kansas Democrats have nominated ex-Governor Charles Robinson for Governor. The "Resubmissionists," a Republican faction opposed to Prohibition, endorsed the nomination. The "Resubmissionists" adopted resolutions endorsing the National Republican party.

The New York Times (Dem.) announces that the Wisconsin Democratic platform will demand the unconditional repeal of the Compulsory Education law. The Democratic party is notorious for truckling to the prejudice and fanaticism of foreigners, but as an act of deep-dyed subserviency this beats the party record.

The inane and lugubrious comments of the Democratic papers on the Maine election are painful reading; but the desperate attempt which they make not to appear surprised, and their endeavor to make their readers believe that the result is just what they expected, are calculated to remove any remaining confidence which their readers might feel in them.

What has that Third party organ, The Voice, got to say in reply to the charge of being the meanest and most dishonest paper in America? These applications are given in full: "Iowa Republicans from Iowa prohibitionists in a Third party movement and then suppressed the expressed opinions of that multitude of these same prohibitionists who had no use for the Third party."

Sir Michael and Sir Hans.

THE BOYCOTT ON THE SHOOTS OF BROWN, THE HARLOW AND DEFAULTER.

[O. W. Holmes in Atlantic Monthly.]

One of my neighbors, a thorough American, is much concerned about the growth of what he calls the "shirtlandled aristocracy." He tells the following story.

I was putting up a fence about my yard and employed a man named Hiram Sweetser, so that he was industrious, temperate and that he had a wife and children to support, a worthy man, a native New Englander. I engaged him to work for me some odd jobs. My employe bought a new spade for the purpose, and came to my place at the appointed time and began digging. While he was at work two men came over from a drinking saloon, one of them was called Sir Michael Fagan, the other as Hans Schlitzer. They looked at Hiram, my New Hampshire farmer, a contemptuous and threatening way for a minute or so, when Fagan addressed him:

"And how much does the man pay you by the hour?"

"The gentleman doesn't pay me by the hour," said Hiram.

"How much does he pay you for the week?" said Hans.

"I don't know as that's any of your business," answered Hiram.

"Faith, we'll make it our business," said Mike Fagan. "We're Knights of Labor, we have yez to know, and we can't make our business gains just as yez likes. We manes to know how many hours yez works, and how much yez gets for it."

"Knights of Labor!" said I. "Why, that is a kind of title of nobility, isn't it? I thought the laws of our country didn't allow titles of that kind. But if you have a right to be called knights, I suppose I ought to address you as such. Sir Michael, I suppose, is the name of the dignity you have attained. I hope Lady Fagan is getting on well with my shirts. Sir Hans, I pay my respects to your title. I trust that Mrs. Schlitzer and the baby are well. I see you are a man of business, and can't stand any difficulty between her ladyship and yourself, in which the police court thought it necessary to intervene."

"The two men looked at me. I weigh about 190 pounds, and am well put together. Hiram was noted in his village as a "raiser." But my face is rather pallid and peaked, and Hiram had something of a greenhorn look. The two men, who had been drinkfree, hardly knew what ground to take. They hesitated at the sound of Sir Michael and Sir Hans. They did not know very well what to make of their wives as "ladies." They looked doubtful whether to take me for a man who was as easy bell or not, but they wanted a pretext of some kind or other. Presently one of them saw a label on the scoop or long-handled, saucer-like shovel, with which Hiram had been working. It was marked "Patent Hollow Ground." "Ho, ho, but hasn't he been a grindin' well Brown, the hardware fellah, that we boycotted! Grab it Hans, and we'll carry it off and show it to the brotherhood."

The men made a move toward the implement.

"You let that alone, sonnyboard," said Hiram.

I stepped to his side. The Knights were combative, as their noble predecessors with the same title always were, and it was necessary to come to the vole de fait. My straight blow from the shoulder did for Sir Michael, Hiram knocked Sir Hans to what is technically known as a cross-buttock.

"Naow, Dutchman," said Hiram, "if you don't want to be planted in that air garden, you'd better take yer off of this piece of private property. Their ye kin git up, an' git. Git up, I say, an' git!" Hiram, as the signposts say, almost these times.

"Sir Michael went down half stunned by my expressive gesture; Sir Hans did not look quite so well. Hiram, who was not to be trifled with, had a look in his eye that they were both afraid of possible retribution for further hostilities. Perhaps it was but fair to take advantage of their misfortunes to inflict a discourse upon them, but I felt bound to do so. Hiram, in his quiet way, had brought on himself a piece of our mind, each of us gave them a piece of our mind.

"I tell you what is it," said Hiram, "I'm a free and independent American citizen, and I won't a-goin' to let no man tyrannize over me, if he does call himself by some of Queen Victoria's titles. If I can't work jes' as I please, for folks that wants me to work for, I might jes' as well go to Sibery and done with it. My grandfather was in Bunker Hill battle. I guess if our folks in them days didn't care an great deal about the King of Great Britain, they wouldn't a-goin' to be scart by Sir Michael Fagan and Sir Hans What's-his-name, nor no other fellahs that undertakes to be noblemen, and tells us common folks what we shall do an' what we shan't. No, sir.

"I took the opportunity to explain to Sir Michael and Sir Hans what it was our fathers fought for, and what is the meaning of liberty. If these noblemen did not like our ways, they could go elsewhere. If they didn't like the laws, they had the ballot box, and could choose new legislators. But as long as the laws existed they must obey them. I could not admit that, because they called themselves by the titles that old world nobility thought so much of, they had a right to interfere in the agreements I entered into with my neighbor. I told Sir Michael that if he would go home and help Lady Fagan to saw and split the wood for her fire, he would be better employed than in meddling with my domestic arrangements. I advised Sir Hans to ask Lady Schlitzer for her bottle of spirits to use as an abscription for his lame leg. And so my two visitors with the aristocratic titles staggered off, and left us plain, untitled citizens, Hiram and myself, to set our posts and consider the question whether we lived in a free country or under the authority of a self-constituted order of quasi-nobility."

Echoes from the Maine Election.

A VICTORY FOR PROHIBITION—THE ENDORSEMENT OF THE SPEAKER.

Governor Burleigh said, the day after election: "I must confess that the result of the election was somewhat of a surprise to me. From information received from every section of the State, I was prepared for a substantial victory but did not expect quite so decisive an expression of public sentiment. The result was, first of all, a vigorous endorsement of prohibition, such as must forever put an end to the foolish claim that the people of the State are ready to exchange the present policy for one that will give legal status and respectability to the drunkards.

"As it was an endorsement of the Republican endeavor to secure honest elections and make a vote in one section of the country just as potent as in another. It was a victory for the protective policy under which our nation has grown and prospered beyond all others, a repudiation of the free trade fallacies with which theorists have endeavored to beguile the people.

"The endorsement given Speaker Reed by the Republicans in the First District was most remarkable and emphatic, and one which he entirely deserved. It was an endorsement of him personally and politically.

"So far as this election has applied to myself I need not say that I am deeply sensitive of the generous expression of confidence and good will that has been given me."

Chairman Manley's words in the afternoon were: "Additional returns received up to noon fully confirm the estimate made by an agent of the Associated Press at Portland early this morning. The Republican plurality is the largest thrown in an off year in any election, State or National, since 1869. On the popular vote we carry every county but Waldo. The Senate will stand 27 Republicans and five Democrats, and the House 120 Republicans and 31 Democrats. The causes which have led to this sweeping Republican victory are attributed to the position the Democratic party took upon the prohibition issue, and are an endorsement of the position of the Republican party on the questions of protection, the enlargement of our foreign trade, an approval of the shipping subsidy and sea on postal bills, and of the wise and economical administration of Gov. Burleigh. The business, commercial and agricultural interests of Maine are thoroughly in favor of these measures."

MURAT HALSTEAD'S OPINION.

Commenting on the result of the election in Maine, Murat Halstead says in the Brooklyn Standard-Union: "The Democratic party in Maine jeopardized its fortunes by its attempt to make the issue of the Lodge bill, especially as its expediency, for the Republicans have carried the country without that sort of law, and will hold again, especially as they have now the administration of the laws in their own hands, and the fearfulness of consequences following the expansion of Brockaurbridge, shows what may be done in the way of the collection and application of information. . . . What do we learn? Nothing that we did not know before, but gains just as yesterday. We manes to know how many hours ye works, and how much ye gets for it."

"Knights of Labor!" said I. "Why, that is a kind of title of nobility, isn't it? I thought the laws of our country didn't allow titles of that kind. But if you have a right to be called knights, I suppose I ought to address you as such. Sir Michael, I suppose, is the name of the dignity you have attained. Maine Matters.

NEWS AND GOSSIP FROM ALL OVER THE STATE.

A LIQUOR RAID IN MADISON.

Saturday evening officers Harding and Stewart made a raid upon the Exchange Hotel. They found many evidences of the transgression of the liquor law, but found but one bottle partly filled. There is no doubt but there was more than, but there being so many in the house at the time it was undoubtedly concealed about their persons. Mr. Worthen, the proprietor, offered what assistance he could to the officers and says he desires to rid his house of these rum peddlers. After the officers had searched the house the hoodlums and village toughs, who are in sympathy with the rum traffic, set up a howling and yelling that was most disgraceful to any well regulated community. How long our people are going to put up with this sort of thing we cannot tell, but we must say that to allow such gatherings of low-lived roughs as nightly gather in outsiponing places about our village, insulting gentlemen and ladies as they pass, and obstructing sidewalks so that ladies are obliged to step out into the street, shouting vile epithets and indulging in profanity and indecent language, is a shame and disgrace to the town, and it is high time that the officers took active and effective measures to rid our village of such a contemptible nuisance. THE STATE FAIR AT LEWISTON.

The Lewiston fair opened Sept. 10. The stock entries were very good. The short-horns were represented by heads from King of Shadeland, Maine, Ira Berry, Jr., of Lakefield, Wanzie of Starks and Oaks Bros. of Farmington. Fine Hereford by Burleigh, the famous Vassalboro breeder, the Underwoods, Fayette, Bates of Winthrop and others. The Holsteins by J. S. Sanborn of Boston from his Poland farm, Brest of Guilford, Boardman of Bangor and Berry of New Gloucester. There were several herds of Maine and American Merinos and Cotswolds. Dorsets, Downs and Sussex cattle were represented by good herds, while grades of all breeds were in great abundance. The herds of matched cattle and single specimens were numerous. For drawing contests there were 30 entries. The horses deep present there were 300 animals for exhibition are over 200 for trotting. The fruit was not up to the usual standard but good specimens were shown. The agricultural building was well filled as was the agricultural hall and the special building for poultry.

MAKING MAINE SALMON.

The Maine State commissioner of fisheries notes in his report an account by Mr. C. G. Atkins of the marking of Schoodic salmon at Grand Lake stream, Maine, for the purpose of identifying them on their return the following season. Thirty-five per cent. of the fish so marked were taken in the river in 1888. At the close of the spawning season of 1888 the commissioner wrote to the Boston Herald, inquiring and an answer was made, as to what was known of the marked salmon. The following season and thereafter the fish were more numerous than ever before. There is every reason to believe that the Election bill will become a law, at least by the Christmas holidays, if there shall not be an extraordinary call of the House of Congress.

The Democrats, in their course today, have given new life to the Republicans to endeavor to enforce the will of the majority and to enact the measures proposed. If a Republican quorum can be obtained, it will be only necessary that the session of the present Congress shall be prolonged beyond Oct. 1, even if these new measures shall be passed. The Republicans will not consent to any further trading with the Democrats in the matter of the orders from the Committee on Rules will undoubtedly be brought in, so that these measures, if the Republicans shall agree that they shall be passed, can be passed within the time specified.

AN APPORTIONMENT BILL.

The first result of the new movement to enact additional important legislation at this session was the introduction in the House late this afternoon of an apportionment bill by Mr. Dunnell, of Minnesota, the chairman of the Committee on the Census. The fact that the bill had hardly been introduced when it was withdrawn, and another one on a different basis substituted for it, indicated that the point was not wholly forfeited. The bill first introduced contemplated a membership of 356 in the first Congress to which the bill was properly, namely, the Fifty-third, the basis of representation being 173,571. Under this plan Ohio would have been the only State which would have lost a member. This fact was immediately withdrawn and another substituted for it, which makes 158,000 the basis of representation, and which gives 357 members. The present membership is 356, so, if the numbers to be credited to Idaho and Wyoming, which have been admitted, are to be counted, 362 members. The last bill introduced by Dunnell gives no increase of Ohio's representation of 24 over the existing membership of 22 when the members from Idaho and Wyoming shall be admitted. Under this plan the States which will gain one each are Alabama, California, Colorado, Michigan, Minnesota, New Jersey, Oregon, Texas, Washington and Wisconsin. The States that will gain two each are Arkansas, Illinois, Kansas, Pennsylvania and New York, and three each will gain Minnesota and Nebraska. The States that will lose one each are Virginia and Ohio. Under the proposed plan the representation of New England would remain unchanged. A analysis of this plan shows that the Republican States would have an increase greatest in the Congressional representation and consequently in the Electoral college.

Literary News and Notes.

The September number of the New Moon comes to us from the publication office at Lowell, Mass., with its usual full quota of stories, sketches, etc. It is a very readable publication.

The September number (monthly part) of Golden Days is a remarkably interesting number. Its contents are excellent throughout. The new serials open promisingly. James Elverson, Philadelphia.

Marion Harland has resigned as editor of the "Home Maker," and her husband, Dr. Terhune, and others of her family who have been connected with the publication, have also resigned. Jenny Jane has been engaged as editor.

Sir Edwin Arnold recently read his new poem, "The Light of the World," to a select audience of English and American people, at a house in Tokio which is leased by the Japanese Government to the Tokio club. As the "Light of Asia" gives Buddhism, under the cross light of Christianity, digested into a poem harmonious, complete, beautiful, so "The Light of the World" gives Christianity, under the cross light of Buddhism, digested into one harmonious poem. The work is said to abound in fine lines and in lines which will become household words.

The Art Amateur gives us one of its two color supplements for September a double page panel picture of "Climbing Kittens" by the famous English artist, Helena Maguire. Nothing at once so life-like and artistically attractive has probably ever been given gratis with an art magazine. It is to be followed by a companion panel of "Descending Kittens" by the same painter. China painting designs in color form the other color supplement. In black and white designs there is the usual abundance of patterns for china painting, wood carving, brass hammering, etching, and, indeed, all kinds of decorative art work; and the text comprises, besides much admirable criticism about art and artists, invaluable practical articles on House Decoration, Pen Drawing for Illustration, Etching Painting, Still-Life Painting in oils, Landscape Painting, Drawing in Chalk and Charcoal, Miniature Painting, Wood Carving, Brass Hammering, China Painting, Monogram Designing and Art Embroidery. The Answers to Correspondents are crowded with information useful to all art students. Price 35 cents. Montague Marks, Publisher, 23 Union Square, New York.

Republicans Aroused.

A DETERMINATION MANIFESTED TO PUSH BUSINESS AHEAD. REPUBLICAN ABSENTEES EXPECTED TO REPORT FOR DUTY. AN APPORTIONMENT BILL INTRODUCED IN THE HOUSE.

[Special Dispatch to The Boston Journal.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10. There never has been a better illustration of the maxim that the Bourbons never learn and never forget anything than was manifested in the House of Representatives to-day. Speaker Reed sat in the anteroom waiting for a convenient time to resume his gavel. A large number of enrolled bills had been prepared for signature in the name of the acting Speaker of the House. Mr. Reed did not care to return to his duties until after those bills had been signed in that form, as there might be some questions as to their legality. Meanwhile the Democrats had put the House in deadlock. The doors were closed. Mr. Reed, fresh from its victory of the people, where 5,000,000 votes had assented their approval in his administration of the House, was practically compelled to wait for the filibustering to end before he could properly resume his seat. The Democrats entered upon a career of filibustering obstruction upon the Langston contested election case and continued it throughout the day. The result was that the Republican indignation, which has been very great all winter, was increased to a point which it has not reached before. It was again decided to pass a resolution calling in all the absentees, and it is now the intention of the Republicans to endeavor to keep their own quorum here and to transact the important business of the Congress.

A REPUBLICAN QUORUM NEEDED.

A movement was started to-day with a great deal of vigor, and it has assumed large proportions, in view of the Democratic attitude, to not only secure the Republican quorum to consider the pending business, but to take up at once send to the Senate the anti-gerrymander bill and an apportionment bill. Prominent Senators were on the floor of the House to-day urging the delegation from their respective States to determination on the policy. They were advised that the Senate is now in a condition of mind to warrant the House by sending these measures to the Senate with confidence that they might be acted upon at this session. The Republican Senators are anxious clear the desk of all important matters, so that nothing would be in the way of the Election bill on the first day of the next session, which is that this session should be a special session of November or the regular session in December. The argument made is that the Democrats are determined that nothing shall be accomplished, and that it is the Republicans' duty to do all that possibly can be done for the benefit of the country at this session of Congress, in order that nothing may interfere with the enactment of the Election law next winter. It is known that there are Republicans who favor the passing for an Apportionment bill, if Congress desires to enact such a measure at this session.

REPUBLICAN ABSENTEES.

There is a very earnest feeling in this matter to-day, and it possibly may take definite shape. Reports from Republican centrals in resolutions determining that nothing should be accomplished to the Republicans to-day. It is possible that Mr. Reed may be able to inspire them with new vigor, and that the Democrats in the attitude they have taken will be forced to do what they had not expected. That the Election bill will pass the Senate at the next session there seems to be no reasonable doubt. The republican compact, of which so much has been said, has taken shape, and it is said that, if only three Republican Senators, a quorum of them, have signed an agreement that the Election bill shall be brought up the first thing at the next session of Congress, it shall be considered in the exclusion of all other business. It is said it shall be disposed of by a vote, and that, if necessary to enact it, the rules shall be changed for that purpose. The provisions of this compact are known to be very stringent, and it is understood. The Republican Senators generally have found themselves to this compact, there being only four who have not signed it. Of these four one is in Europe, Senator Stanford, but he is known to be in favor of the Election bill. There is every reason to believe that the Election bill will become a law, at least by the Christmas holidays, if there shall not be an extraordinary call of the House of Congress.

The Democrats, in their course to-day, have given new life to the Republicans to endeavor to enforce the will of the majority and to enact the measures proposed. If a Republican quorum can be obtained, it will be only necessary that the session of the present Congress shall be prolonged beyond Oct. 1, even if these new measures shall be passed. The Republicans will not consent to any further trading with the Democrats in the matter of the orders from the Committee on Rules will undoubtedly be brought in, so that these measures, if the Republicans shall agree that they shall be passed, can be passed within the time specified.

Cats and Dogs in a City.

It is said that the city would be overrun with rats and mice were it not for the unceasing vigilance of its army of cats, and the care bestowed upon the gigantic mousers who are pets of the produce merchants and down-town business men generally argues in favor of the truth of this assertion. But, the same plea cannot be made for dogs, and especially for the gigantic imported hounds whose size and strength send a shudder through the veins of nervous women and cause even men to remark that they would scarcely care to meet them alone in the dark, says the New York Sun. Yet this meeting happens not infrequently in some of the quiet up-town streets and avenues between 10 o'clock and midnight. At that time the owners of these great creatures have a habit of taking them out for a stroll. The dogs are neither muzzled nor led by a chain and often are at some distance from their owners. No dog catcher would venture to attempt their capture, and the timid pedestrian dares not remonstrate, but passes at as great a distance as possible, congratulating himself on his escape. They are magnificent animals—these great fellows of the Siberian blood-hound group—but they form a finer picture when viewed from a point of safety within doors and apart from any calculation of the length of time they would require to turn a man into mince-meat.

Among the things saved from the rubbish when the home of the late Henry Ward Beecher was broken up at his death were two leather-bound books in which he kept his farm accounts, and right in among the tables of dollars and cents, corn and potatoes, turnips, cabbages etc., will be found descriptions of flowers or trees. In one instance several pages are given up to lamenting the death of his farmer.

Catching the Colt.

With forehead star, and silver tail,
And three white feet to match,
The gay, half-broken, sorrel colt,
Which one of us could catch?
"I can," said Dick, "I'm good for that;"
He slowly shook his empty hat,
"She'll think 'tis full of corn," said he,
"Stand back and she will come to me."
Her head the shy, proud creature raised
As 'mid the daisy flowers she grazed,
Then down the hill, across the brook,
Delaying off, her way she took.
Then changed her pace and slowly, quick,
She hurried on and came to Dick.
"Ha! ha!" he cried, "I've caught you, Beck!"
And put the halter round her neck.

And soon there came another day,
When eager for a ride,
"I'll go and catch the colt again,
I can," said Dick, with pride.
So up the stony pasture came,
And up the hill he trudged again;
And when he saw the colt, as slow
He slowly shook his head to mock,
"She'll think, 'Its full of corn,'" he thought,
"And I shall have her quickly caught."
Beck, Beck, he called, and at the sound
The restless beauty looked around,
Then made a quick, impatient turn,
And galloped off among the fern.
And when beneath a tree she stopped,
Then leisurely some clover cropped,
Dick followed after, but in vain;
His hand was as unsteady as the brame,
When off she flew as this the wind,
And panting he pressed on behind.
Down through the brake, the brook across,
O'er bushes, thickets, beds of moss,
Round and round the place they passed,
Till breathless, Dick sank down at last.
Three hours, perhaps, had passed, when
"The colt," he said, "remembers that!
There's always trouble from colt.
I'll never try again, I've got it."
Marian Douglass, in Stockman.

If I Were You.

If I were you, I often say
To those who come to heed advice,
I'd always look before I leap;
I'd always think it over twice.
And then I'd have a troubled sigh
For, after all, I'm only I.

I'd never discuss, if I were you,
The failings of my neighbors,
I'd think of all their virtues first,
And scan my own shortcomings the
But though all this is good and true,
I am but I, I am not you.

If I were you and half so vain,
Amidst my folly I would pause
To see how dull and light a fool
I was myself. I think because
And here I know a pitying sigh
I am not you, I'm only I.

If I were you, no selfish care
Should chase my cheery smile away,
I'd share my pound here, love and hope,
For a kindness every day.
But here again I find it true
That I am I, and you are you.

I would not be so very quick
To take offense, if I were you,
I would respect myself, at least,
Whatever others say or do.
Alas! can no one tell me why
I am not you, I'm only I.

In short, if I were only you
And could forget that I was I,
I think that little cherub wings
Would spread upon my back, by and by.

Hoe Cake and Hominy.

CONDITIONS OF SOUTHERN FOODS FOR CORN FOODS.

"One reason why I spend my summers in the South is that things are so much cheaper down there," said a Washington lady to a newspaper man the other day. "Last season I spent in a delightful Virginia valley, where I rented a little house for myself and family at almost nothing a month, and supplied myself with necessaries from what the natives had to sell. Being 10 miles from a railway was an inconvenience; but thanks to this very fact there was no market within reach. I was able to buy a dozen plump spring chickens for $1.25, and other edibles at proportionate prices. I have found it so all over the South, where the people have no ready way of disposing of their produce, and a little money goes astonishingly far. For instance, last summer I paid 12½ cents a pound for the finest butter. Cooking butter was only 8 to 10 cents a pound. I used no lard, because butter was cheaper. Eggs were 10 cents a dozen and vegetables and fruits cost hardly anything.

"Having been from New England I cannot get over my amazement at the extraordinary fondness people in the Southern cabin for corn in every shape. In Massachusetts no one ever thinks of eating corn bread, they do not know how to cook it, they do not like it, and if they did. Down South, on the other hand, every one must have corn bread three times a day every day in the week. Also what seems to me a horrible mess of—in their half-witted mush and other stuff—corn appears on the table twice each day and is consumed in large quantities by everybody. Besides there are many extraordinary preparations of corn altogether outstanding to the inhabitants of the Eastern States. Where I live, for instance, I go so far to satisfy corn-meal cravings. The eating of corn seems fairly to become a habit. In Germany and in Europe generally it is not considered fit food for human beings, and yet political economists say that the adoption of hundreds of millions of poor people over there would be vastly improved if they could only be taught to like its vegetable. Efforts in that direction have been made, but in vain. Only there it is not a question of hoe cake, but of Goldsmith's Folks. It is the cheapest food in the world, with the exception of oats and peas.

"In the South every one eats white corn meal in preference to yellow. Northern people even in the Middle States, detest the white meal as a rule and almost always make their corn bread of yellow meal. This is due, they do not get white meal fresh when they buy it. If they could, as much fresh meal is done in the South, and get their white meal ground within twenty-four hours, or at most forty-eight hours, they would relish it more much better than the yellow meal it is. But the white meal will not keep as all knows its quality within two or three days.

"Hominy is cheaper in the South than in Washington, such necessaries of life are considered more costly in Boston than in Washington. Marketing is so much dearer there. For example, the best cut from the tender part of the round costs at most 12 cents a pound in Washington, while in Boston the price is 25 cents.

"Speaking of corn reminds me of a very charming young woman from Virginia who made me a fortnight's visit here this spring. I tried to have lots of such things as I thought people where she lived, live exclusively. She seemed fond of her hominy and hoe cakes. At all events she claimed to be not very well during the latter part of her stay at my house, and when I asked her if I could provide anything for her that she was especially fond of, she replied that she was perfectly satisfied with what her grandmother provided her at home. But of course, she added, she could not expect to find them in Washington.

"Such delicacies as what to you mean?" I asked, not knowing what to think.

"Well, such as ash cake, for instance. One makes the corn meal into a cone shape of dough with water and salt. Then the cone is wrapped in a cabbage leaf and put into the ashes of an open fire to cook. Oh, it is so good!"

Generalities.

Cattle on the State farm at Manchester, N. H., are affected with tuberculosis.

The splendid English estate of the young Duke of Newcastle has just been purchased by John Robinson, a better in races, and liquor dealer.

Miss Eleanor McAllister, M. D., of Newburgh, N. Y., has been appointed assistant physician at the Buffalo State Asylum for the Insane.

After a stormy discussion the Trades Union Congress in Liverpool voted, 181 to 175, in favor of having the working day of eight hours made compulsory by Parliament.

The dogs of a Vermont farmer, which were smuggled into St. Johns, Quebec, have been confiscated by the Canadian government. The farmer's team and cart were also seized.

Sister Rose Gertrude, the young English nurse who created such a sensation a few months ago by volunteering to go to the Medical depot station, has given up the work.

The poet Swinburne is a little man with a big head, which is fringed with auburn hair. He is quick and nervous in his movements and a very brilliant talker. He is a bachelor.

The National Reform Party has been formed at St. Louis. It wants to abolish national banks, make railroads government property, secure uniform marriage laws, and do many other things.

The New York Evening Telegram prints a petition which it says is being circulated among the stockholders of the Illinois Central railroad urging them to rebel against the present management of the company. The petition says the debt has been increased by several millions of dollars since 1885.

Prince Bismarck, receiving a deputation of Kissingen veterans, said that the inventions for making warfare were becoming more and more murderous. No indemnity could compensate for the misery and expense caused by the new methods of warfare; therefore, happily, every one thought well before beginning a war.

Dying with Humors

Which Three Doctors Could Not Cure Cured in Four Weeks by Cuticura Remedies.

I wrote you about four years ago of the wonderful cure I made with your CUTICURA REMEDIES of a foul humor on my face which twelve doctors failed to understand or cure. Three years ago last fall my son went to Sacramento, Cal., and in two or three months he broke out with a humor on his stomach and back, suffering very much. He employed three different doctors, and at last they told him to go back to Maine, as his disease was caused by change of climate, and he could not live in California. He wrote me that he was coming home, for he was dying with a humor that the doctors could not cure. I wrote him to get some CUTICURA REMEDIES and take according to directions, and bathe freely with the CUTICURA SOAP, and in four weeks after he got my letter he wrote me he was entirely cured. He came home a few weeks ago on a visit, and I asked him how he was. He said, I have recommended these remedies to a great many people with bad cases that would not yield to doctors' medicines, and in no case have I heard them to fail to make a cure. If you wish to refer any one to me, I will answer, with pleasure.

HARRISON STEVENS, East Jackson, Me.

Cuticura Resolvent

The new Blood and Skin Purifier and greatest of Humor Remedies, internally, to cleanse the blood of all impurities and poisonous elements, and thus remove the cause, and CUTICURA, the great Skin Cure, and CUTICURA SOAP, an exquisite Skin Beautifier, externally, to clear the skin and scalp, and rest to the hair, especially and permanently cure every species of itching, burning, scaly, crusted, pimply, scrofulous, and hereditary skin and scalp humors, infancy to age, from pimples to scrofula, when the best physicians and all other remedies fail. This is a strong language, but we mean it, and it is true. CUTICURA REMEDIES are the greatest skin cures, blood purifiers, and humor remedies of modern times.

No Cure, No Pay.

DR. E. F. TOWNSEND, of Boston, Mass., inventor of Oxygenated Air, also the Inhalation System in this country, also inventor of many Medical Remedies and Surgical Instruments, having devoted over twenty-five years to the treating and cure of chronic diseases of every description with marked success, has established such perfect confidence in his own ability and remedies, that he is perfectly willing to treat and cure the sick, without receiving a dollar for professional services until a cure is established.

If you are sick or ailing from any cause, do not fail to see Dr. Townsend.

Such is the peculiar mechanism of the human system that it often becomes deranged, debilitated and diseased from slight causes,—for instance, a mistit of eye glasses, or neglect to procure them when needed, oftentimes deranges the entire system, as any strain upon the eyes directly affects the nerves throughout the whole system. Having made Oculism in all its varied forms a long and deep study, and having, by my improved system, cured diseases and restored sight in every manner, I now make this feature a specialty. Eyes examined free. Glasses of every description made to order, warranted to fit, and furnished at most reasonable prices, send your name and address to 26 New Seaver St., Boston, Mass., for circular.

PRESS NOTES.

"Seeing is Believing."

And the best lamp ever made, like Aladdin's old, a "wonderful lamp!" A lamp absolutely non-explosive and unbreakable, which gives a clear, and brilliant white light of 85 candle power. Purer and brighter than gas light, safer than electric light, more cheerful than either! This lamp is

"The Rochester."

And you can have it without smoke, no smell, no care whatever, no smoking, no clinking up of the flame, no "tantrums" nor annoyance of any kind, and it never can get out of order. Its founts (oil reservoirs) being made of rolled seamless brass, with central draft, it is absolutely unbreakable, and is safe.

Only five years old, and over two million of them in use. It must be a GOOD lamp to make such a falling off in kerosene. Indeed it is, for lamps may come and lamps may go, but the "Rochester" shines on forever! We make several 2,000 candle varieties, Hanging and Table Lamps, Banquet, Study, Vase and Piano Lamps, every kind, in Bronze, Fine Brass, Nickel, Porcelain and Wrought Iron. Ask the lamp dealer for it. Look for the trade-mark stamped on the burner. If he has not the "Rochester" and the style you want, or if no lamp store is near, send to us for free illustrated catalogue and reduced prices, and we will ship you a strong, safe lamp safely by express, right to your door.
